What is Martyn's Law?

This page provides an overview of Martyn's Law and its key requirements.

Martyn's Law, also known as the Protect Duty, is a vital legislative measure introduced by the Home Office, aimed at strengthening the security of public spaces and events in the face of rising terrorism threats.

This law has been established following the tragic 2017 Manchester Arena bombing, where Martyn Hett was one of 22 victims. The new regulations aim to safeguard staff and visitors at venues, ensuring that businesses are prepared to handle potential security breaches.

Martyn Hett, one of the victims, became the symbol of a wider call for action to ensure venues take steps to better protect the public. His mother, Figen Murray, campaigned tirelessly to bring about this change, highlighting the lack of security measures at publicly accessible locations.

The law is a tribute to the lives lost and a proactive step towards preventing similar tragedies in the future.

The law mandates that premises with a maximum capacity of over 100 people must implement appropriate protective measures, while those hosting more than 800 people must adhere to additional security requirements. Martyn's Law was recently given Royal Assent, and businesses are now required to comply, with an implementation period of up to 24 months.

💡 Top Tip:

Start reviewing your venue's safety plans now to make compliance with Martyn's Law easier when enforcement begins.

How Does Martyn's Law Impact Your Business

This page explains how Martyn's Law may affect your business and what steps you may need to take to comply.

The regulations introduced by Martyn's Law are tiered based on the size and capacity of the venue. They provide clear guidelines for both small-to-medium-sized enterprises and large organisations. For venues with a capacity of over 100, the following measures are required:

Training: Staff must be trained to recognise security vulnerabilities and suspicious activities, ensuring they can respond quickly and effectively.

Information Sharing: Premises must collaborate with local authorities, emergency services, and other relevant parties to identify and address potential security threats and ensure comprehensive public safety.

Preparedness Plan: A documented plan outlining the security measures and responses to potential threats must be in place. This ensures a swift and coordinated response in the event of an incident.

For venues with a capacity exceeding 800, further security measures are required, including:

Risk assessments to identify vulnerabilities and ensure preparedness

Enhanced training for staff to build a culture of vigilance and improve security awareness.

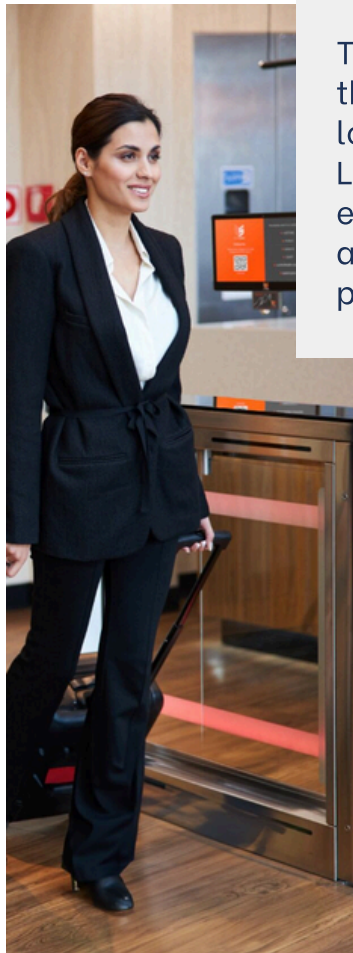

The installation of physical security systems, such as CCTV, access control readers, and security monitoring systems, which are all critical elements under the new regulations.

A Vital Part Of Compliance

This page outlines a vital part of complying with Martyn's Law and what it means for your business.

EntrySign Visitor Management

Total ID's EntrySign Visitor System is the ideal solution for organisations looking to comply with Martyn's Law. This system not only ensures efficient visitor management but also enhances the security of your premises.

Why EntrySign Visitor Management Complies with Martyn's Law

EntrySign not only manages visitors but also supports Martyn's Law compliance with a built-in lockdown and emergency communication solution. It provides real-time visitor logs to assist evacuation and emergency response. Instant alerts can be sent to staff via PCs, large displays, Microsoft Teams, mobile devices, and speaker systems. Staff can also report incidents in real time, ensuring fast, coordinated responses. By keeping everyone informed and enabling quick action, EntrySign helps organisations stay prepared and compliant.

A Comprehensive Security Strategy

We will outline the key components of a comprehensive security strategy and why it's essential for protecting your business.

While Martyn's Law addresses the need for businesses to be prepared for acts of terrorism, it is also an opportunity to improve the overall security framework of your premises. By implementing an EntrySign Visitor System, you can ensure your visitors, staff, and assets are protected not just from terrorism but from any potential security threats.

Additional security measures to consider include:

CCTV Surveillance: This helps identify suspicious activity both inside and outside of your premises. It allows for early detection of any potential threats and ensures there is a record of events should an incident occur.

Access Control Systems: These systems monitor and restrict access to key areas of your building. This ensures that only authorised personnel can access restricted zones, helping to protect sensitive information and assets.

Staff Training and Drills: It's essential to ensure that all employees are well-trained in security protocols, know how to handle emergencies, and understand the importance of compliance with Martyn's Law. Regular drills can ensure preparedness in case of an actual incident
